Since 1 July 2009, industrial organisations such as employer associations and unions have been able to apply to the Fair Work Commission for registration under the Fair Work (Registered Organisations) Act 2009 (the RO Act). These organisations provide support and advice to employers and employees to help them better understand their rights and obligations in the workplace.

As of 1 May 2017, the Registered Organisations Commission regulates registered organisations. However, some registered organisations functions remain with the Fair Work Commission.

The organisations listed below are not associated with the Fair Work Ombudsman or the Australian Government. Clicking a link to the below organisations will take you out of this website.

There are industrial associations active in Australia that are not registered under the RO Act, such as your local chamber of commerce, that can also offer assistance.

Find your industry:

Peak organisations

- Australian Council of Trade Unions (http://www.actu.org.au/)
- Australian Chamber of Commerce and Industry (http://www.acci.asn.au/)

Only registered organisations (an organisation registered under the Fair Work Act) are included in the below list. They're ordered by industry and categorised as either an employer association (E) or union (U).

Multiple Industries

These registered organisations provide support and advice to employers and employees in a broad variety of industries. You can contact them directly for further information.
