

Businessman faces further legal action for allegedly underpaying staff $1.8 million

16 July 2014

Sydney man Kia Silverbrook will face additional court proceedings alleging he was involved in underpaying 22 employees more than $1.8 million.

Mr Silverbrook is already the subject of court action in which the Fair Work Ombudsman alleges 21 workers are owed more than $870,000.

In five separate legal proceedings filed in the Federal Circuit Court in Sydney, the Fair Work Ombudsman alleges that:

- Priority Matters Pty Ltd, which processes patent applications for inventions, underpaid 15 employees a total of $452,997,
- Geneasys Pty Ltd, a medical research and development company, underpaid five employees a total of $362,973,
- Superlattice Solar Pty Ltd, a solar cell research company, underpaid one employee $55,969,
- Mr Silverbrook and IT company MPowa Pty Limited underpaid 17 employees a total of $1.419 million, and
- Mr Silverbrook and Janette Lee – directors of an IT company that traded as Worldwide Specialty Property Services Pty Ltd and Silverbrook Research Pty Ltd before going into liquidation in April this year – were responsible for underpaying five employees a total of $390,984.

Mr Silverbrook was allegedly responsible for the overall direction, management and supervision of operations at Priority Matters, Geneasys and Superlattice Solar and is also a respondent to each of the proceedings.

Engineers, scientists, patent attorneys, patent assistants and patent design assistants are among those who were allegedly underpaid by Priority Matters, Geneasys and Superlattice Solar.

One employee is allegedly owed $166,914.

In the last two matters filed in Court in June, IT professionals, engineers, clerical workers, an accountant and a marketing professional are among those who were allegedly underpaid.

Two employees are allegedly owed more than $200,000.

The Fair work Ombudsman claims the $1.8 million worth of underpayments are primarily the result of employees not being paid either their full wages or any wages at all for extended periods of work between February and December last year.

Employees were also variously underpaid amounts of public holiday pay, leave entitlements, termination entitlements and redundancy pay.

It is alleged that when some employees queried Mr Silverbrook about why their entitlements had not been paid, he told staff there were not sufficient funds to pay wages.

“Many of the employees continued to provide services based on expectations that cash flow problems would be solved and they would be paid,” says Fair Work Ombudsman Natalie James.

“They continued to work without being paid for many months - notwithstanding the impact on their own financial position and requests for payment.”

Ms James says the employers’ alleged failure to rectify the non-payment of such a large wages bill, despite efforts by Fair Work inspectors, is a key factor in the two additional matters being placed before the court.

Mr Silverbrook and Ms Lee face maximum penalties of up to $10,200 per contravention, while Mpowa Pty Limited faces penalties of up to $51,000 per breach.
