

Uniforms, vehicle & travel entitlements

Find information about payments for uniforms, vehicles and travel.

As part of their job, employees may be required to:

- wear uniforms
- drive vehicles and/or
- travel to other locations.

In these situations, an employee may be entitled to a payment or repayment, depending on the industry and the job they do.

Employees required to buy work related items can't be forced by their employer to use their wages to pay for these items, if the requirement is unreasonable.

If you're covered by an enterprise agreement or other registered agreement (www.fairwork.gov.au/Dictionary.aspx?TermID=2034), payments for uniforms, vehicles and travel will be contained in your agreement. To find an agreement, go to the Fair Work Commission website (<https://www.fwc.gov.au/awards-and-agreements/agreements>) ²⁷.

Find more information about payments for uniforms, vehicles and travel in your award by selecting from the list below.

Based on what you've told us, it looks like you're covered by the Hospitality Industry (General) Award [MA000009].

Uniform entitlements

An employee may have to do work that requires special clothing or work that damages their clothing or footwear.

Special clothing includes:

- uniforms (eg. shirts with the company logo on them)
- items worn for workplace health and safety reasons (eg. protective aprons and protective footwear).

It doesn't include neat casual clothing, black or white clothing, shoes, socks or stockings.

If an employee has to wear special or protective clothing the employer has to:

- provide the clothing or
- reimburse the employee for the cost of the clothing.

The employer also has to pay an employee an allowance each week to cover washing costs, where the employee has to wash any special clothing.

For allowance amounts, go to Penalty rates and allowances (www.fairwork.gov.au/pay/penalty-rates-and-allowances/default).

When special clothing is provided and is not returned at the end of the employment, an employer may be able to deduct the value from an employee's wages as long as:

- the employee signed a receipt for the items when they commenced employment
- the receipt specified the value of the items, and
- the deduction is not due to genuine wear and tear, damage, loss or theft that is not the employee's fault.

Vehicle and transport costs

When a hotel manager employee is asked to use their own vehicle for work purposes they get a vehicle allowance. An employer can ask them to record all the details of their official travel in a log book as a condition of the allowance being paid. For allowance amounts, go to Penalty rates and allowances (www.fairwork.gov.au/pay/penalty-rates-and-allowances/default).

An employee has to be reimbursed the cost of any transport when they:

- start earlier than their normal time and
 - their normal means of transport isn't available and
 - the employer doesn't provide suitable transport or

- finish at a time when
 - their normal means of transport isn't available
 - it would be unreasonable to expect the employee to use their normal means of transport
 - the employer doesn't provide free accommodation or suitable transport.

Travel costs and travel time

When an employee (except a casual) has to work at a place more than 80 km away from their usual workplace they have to be paid an amount equal to the cost of fares reasonably spent in travelling from the usual workplace to the new workplace.

Airport catering employees have to be paid a travelling allowance each day. For allowance amounts, go to Penalty rates and allowances \(www.fairwork.gov.au/pay/penalty-rates-and-allowances/default\) .
